Good morning Waltham!

Today's holiday means schedule changes to various city services. Enjoy the fall foliage and catch up on local news, including our story about Waltham singer Kevin James Graham's audition on the NBC hit show 'The Voice'.

Auroras over Waltham. Check out beautiful photographs taken by residents across the city last Thursday night during a rare display of the northern lights. Suchitra Kappala and her pooch Laika were dazzled by auroras on Forest Street (left).

A car-less Moody Street? New feasibility study offers up 3 options for revamped thoroughfare ahead of Traffic Commission evaluation. The proposals will be presented on October 17 at 10 a.m. at Waltham City Hall.

School Committee votes to consider new safety measures at schools after recent threat. The School Committee unanimously voted to explore implementing metal detectors at Waltham's two middle schools and its high school.

Neighborhood meeting reviews plans to slow traffic. City officials plan to take action to slow traffic on Crescent Street, in response to ongoing concerns about speeding through that area.

Waltham Philharmonic launches its 2024-2025 season this month. The season opens Oct. 27 at 3 p.m. at Government Center with works by Samuel Coleridge-Taylor, Jean Sibelius and Alan Hovhaness. The Sibelius violin concerto will feature soloist Sophie Tung.

English language courses this fall. A number of local organizations offering English language classes have announced their fall schedules. If you are interested, now is the time to enroll.

Work of Waltham sculptor and multimedia artist showcased in new show. Boston Sculptors Gallery presents Christopher Abrams: IYKYK , a solo show featuring a new series of small-scale sculpture based on iconic landmarks and forgotten histories in the Boston area.
